

Donnelly pens fourth Youngblood book

Submitted report
Gatlinburg author Keith Donnelly has released the fourth book in his series documenting the escapades of private investigator Donald Youngblood.

Signed copies of Donnelly's book can be purchased at Buie Pottery on Highway 321 in Gatlinburg. Personalized copies are available at www.donaldyoungbloodmysteries.com.

"Three Deadly Drops" is described as a story of greed and revenge as Youngblood unravels the mystery of the Southside Seven before someone else dies.

It all begins when Jessica Crane walks into Youngblood's office asking him to look into the apparent heart-attack death of her husband. At first, the investigator is convinced it is just the delusions of a grieving widow. But as he goes through the motions of his investigations, uncovering a seemingly threatening note and a 20-year-old picture from Desert Storm, he starts to think there may be more to the death of Walter Crane than natural causes.

The investigation takes Youngblood to New Mexico, Louisiana, Memphis, and small towns in South Carolina and Kentucky.

Keith Donnelly has published his fourth book in the murder-mystery series featuring Donald Youngblood. "Three Deadly Drops" is the latest installment of the series.

Books can also be purchased at amazon.com and barnesandnoble.com as well as through Books-A-Million in Sevierville.

Donnelly, a 20-year resident of Gatlinburg, spent years in the New York City publishing world before returning to his East Tennessee roots. From 1992 until his retirement in 2009, he was the Southeastern sales representative for Maple-Vail Book Manufacturing Group in Gatlinburg until he retired to write full-time.

He is a member of Gatlinburg United Methodist Church and the Great Smoky Mountains Association.

In addition to the Donald Youngblood series, Donnelly collaborated with other mystery writers in 2009 on a special project in a book of recipes compiled by Susan Whitfield called "Killer Recipes." All profits are donated to the American Cancer Society. "Killer Recipes" is available online.

Donnelly is currently working on the fifth book in the Youngblood series.

Show to feature fashions from Civil War, 1860s

Submitted report
SEVIERVILLE — Have you ever wondered what it would be like to be in fashion during the 1860s? Getting ready each day was a whole different concept.

A Civil War fashion show, sponsored by the UT Extension Family & Community Education Clubs, will be held from noon to 1 p.m. Monday, Aug. 13, at Fort Sanders Sevier Senior Center.

See what women wore then, and how it affected their daily lifestyles.

Karen Nelms, Grainger County Extension agent, created dresses authentic to the Civil War years. She will be relating stories relating to fashions of that era, while women will be modeling her dresses.

Carroll McMahan, local author of "Sevierville: Images of America," will speak prior to the show, describing life in Sevier County during the Civil War days.

There is no admission charge.

For more information on FCE clubs or the fashion show, contact Linda Hyder, UT Extension, at 453-3695.

Arkansas slayings suspect diagnosed with schizophrenia

BY JEANNIE NUSS

Associated Press

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — An Arkansas man suspected of killing his parents and kidnapping his 12-year-old sister was diagnosed with paranoid schizophrenia five years ago and had a history of violence and making threats, according to police and court records.

Authorities arrested Antonio Whitlow, 33, on Saturday night in Memphis, Tenn., hours after his parents' bodies were found about 135 miles away in Little Rock. His sister was with him, and police said she doesn't appear to have been injured.

Little Rock police have said they expect Whitlow to be extradited to face murder charges in his parents' deaths. On Monday, he was ordered held in lieu of $50,000 bond in Tennessee, where he faces an assault charge in a May stabbing. Authorities say he attacked a man with a butcher knife.

Police haven't said how Whitlow's parents were killed, but a police report lists a knife or some sort of cutting instrument as a weapon.

Whitlow was diagnosed with paranoid schizophrenia and borderline intellectual functioning in 2007, according to court records. He had pleaded not guilty by reason of mental disease or defect to an assault charge, but changed his plea to guilty.

Theological classes planned at Baptist academy

Submitted report
SEYMOUR — The Bible Training Center of Harrison-Chilhowee Baptist Academy announces two foundational theological studies for adults in its fall semester lineup.

Biblical Backgrounds will be offered starting Aug. 18. Systematic Theology begins in October.

Biblical Backgrounds is a study of events from the time of the patriarchs of the Old Testament to the era of the apostolic church. The world of the Bible in its historical context, and factors which influenced the people of the Bible will be covered.

The class will run from 8:30 a.m. to noon, with a mid-morning break in the academy cafeteria.

Systematic Theology is a survey of Christian doctrines, with emphasis upon revelation, the nature and work of God, Jesus Christ, humankind and sin, the Holy Spirit, salvation, and last things, or eschatology.

"Our students were able to finish out their spring semester with a class entitled Pastoral Leadership in a Small Church, which I know encouraged and strengthened their call to ministry," Martin said.

Classes meet in the Hasson Building Clark Library at The King's Academy. Application forms for both admission and financial aid will be provided the first day of class.

Course fees are $175 plus the cost of books. The text book for Biblical Backgrounds is Holman Bible Atlas, Thomas Brisco, ed. ($29.99).

Students are asked to have payment ready the first day of class.

For more information, call the academy at 573-8321 or Martin at (865) 748-1000. Need-based financial assistance is available.
